Thursday of the Fourth Week of Advent

We celebrate morning Mass today and prepare for the Christmas Vigil in the evening followed by the Mass at night. We hear again the same first reading from Sunday, where God through the prophet Nathan tells David of all that He has done for him and will continue to do. David has good intention but God will do the work of salvation through him. That goes the same for us. God wants to work through us because, like David, we cannot save anyone; only God can save!

Zechariah, appropriate for this morning Mass, blesses the God with the words prayed every morning in the Liturgy of the Hours, known as the Benedictus. As we prepare for Christmas in these last moments, may we, too, bless the Good Lord for all He has done for us and wants to continue to do for us!

God Love You!
